The people have steadily grown more radical, the King more reactionary. France is no longer a word of which the masses are afraid, although their King has become a mere dependent of that power. The house of Savoy was never distin-guished for either gentus, indexibility, or liberality. Its ancient Savoy members numbered a line of thick-hended jousters, hawkers, and gove-mands, and the collateral branch of Carignano, to which Victor Emanuel is attached, has produced two brave lighters, neither of whom, o himself, won teore than sympathy. The King has been defrauded of his territory, inveigled into dependent treaties, and his love of ease has itrita ted the enterprising majority of his subjects. There remains but one thing for Emanuel to do, and that is to direct the movement, listen to the will of the nation and ride to the summit of a popular favor which otherwise will overthrow

The Government is in receipt of the following disputch from the United States steamer Lincoln artibling her cruise from San Francisco to the coast and fix positions for light-houses, etc. When this sterile little patch of ground, Rus sian America, was purchased by the United States for the consideration of $7,200,000 in gold, it was thought by a majority of the Ameri can people to be dear at one-tenth part of the sum paid; but later developments are indicating that there are immense sources of wealth is th polar region. The soil may be unproductive but there are riches beneath its ice-bound and speky coast far more valuable than a fertile sol -at least such is the report, confirmed by innu-merable disputches. Although this region has been open to Yankee enterprise but a few months its soil is already prospected over, and is found to contain valuable bads of iron and coal. A no coal has been discovered in California and its discovery in the Russo-American posses

The report seems to be supply confirmed that valuable mines of anthra cite coal have been discovered in Russian Amer ica, in close proximity to an accessible barbon It is stated on good authority that this is the first discovery of anthracite coal in our vast domain of 2,000,000 equare miles west of the Alleghany Mountains. Eastern Ponnsylvania has herotofore contained nearly all the untura cite coal in the world. There is not a to mined in the vast coal-producing region of Great Biltain, whose laborers scoop out 80,000,000 tons of the black diamond, but of the bituminous variety. Pennsylvania positively contains more wealth in her mineral resource than any other section of the globe, because ever; ton of anthracite coal for heating purposes, par ticularly in the smelting of iron, is worth two tons of bituminous coal. The discovery of an thracite coul in Russian America, where there is no population and no trade, may seem of little value at the present time; but in fifty years from now it will be far different. Half a century ago Pennsylvania did not mine more than 400 tons o authracite coal annually; but now her product is sures to the State has given it the appellation of "Black Diamond." nds of Brazil The diam and Hindostan could all be purchased with one week's production of Pennsylvania coal. PETROLEUM AS FUEL.

Mr. John Ponten's Petroleum Burner-A

teum, or day other article for fuel, consists of what is generally termed perfect combustion. The fallney of this theory may be proved in variety of ways. We will for a moment exemto perfectly consume it so far as all its combust! ble parte are concerned, and apply the same modus operandi adopted by a distinguished invantor in his contrivance for hurning crude petroleum. We will place our coal in a retort and drive off or vaporize all the gaseous portions by heat applied underneath, and conduct the gas into a gasometer to be burned along with what ileft in the retort. We will now place the coke, tar and other residuant in a furnace and fire it, and bring to our assistance a powerful air pump, by means of which we will force a blast of air and the gas from the gasometer into the fire. In order to still further aid combustion, we will bring a certain amount of hydrogen gas into requisition, to procure which we will force a jet of steam through a pipe containing from turnings beated to reduces; the oxygen will unite with the iron forming oxide of iron, and the hydrogen will be set thre to mly with the games in the furthe perfect combustion of one ton of coal, and its perfect combustion will accordingly take place. But what has it cost? In the firs we required heat to drive off the gas, which heat was produced by a another ton of coul; we thou forced a blast of air and the gas into the turnace, and manufactured some hydrogen to mix with it. which required a steam engine and holler, con-suming another half ton of coal; then we destroyed a considerable portion of fron which was and in order to pertectly consume it we used mother ton and a half coal costing $900, so that our perfect combustion in this case cost us $15.00 not taking into calculation the cost of other materms. Does any one contend that this mode of burning coal is economical? By simply burning our first ton of cost in the furnace without the appliances, very nearly the same amount of heat would have been produced at a cost of $5.00. Thus it will readily be perceived that perfect combustion does not always indicate economy Another popular delusion appears to be growing epidemical, especially among inventors of petroleum burners. It consists in the supposition that come can be economically burned, and this, not-cannot be burned without decomposition, and h cannot be decomposed without heat, and the hea required to decompose it, and the loss of its oxygen, when decomposed, is very rear double that which its hydrogen gives off when burned. If the hydrogen gave off more heat than the heat required to produce it, we could run our steam engines by hydrogen alone, and thus have some-thing very analogous to perpetual motion. The absurdity of this theory of economical steam burning is therefore apparent.

, In nearly all the prominent petroleum burner.

am is used, and as Foote's machine is supposed and perfect combustion, and is claimed to have to be the par excellence of simplicity, eco withstanding the thorough explanation and exhaustion of the subject by eminent scientific authors. During the past thirty years it has been repeatedly experimented with, and in every instance abandoned as too costly for adoption. I een adopted by the United States Navy and the Pacific Rallroad Company as more economical than coal. We will compare it with our foregoing illustrations and see how economically it produces perfect combustion. As lu the case of one ton of coal previously Mentioned, his oil is that introduced to a retoit sions will mable the Golden State to get its con where the greener portion is converted into oither from Vancouver's Island or from the bed rapor by means of heat applied underneath. Be then forces a powerful bast of all into said vapor. This plane would produce perfect combustion at a loss of about seventy five per cent. The operation, however, does not stop here. Steam is oreed through red-hot from turnings as was the case with our coal, and the hydrogen is manu factured to mix with the other gases. It will be observed that this is precisely the same plan which we adopted for burning one ton of coal, and consequently the same loss is entailed. Another very serious objection has been relied to this mode of burning, which is that the intensity of the flame burns out the flues of the boiler. It is also highly objectionable from the constant accumulation of explosive gases which, if they did explode, would drive back the flame to the main reservoir containing the oil. It is complicated in design, and consequently costly In proportion. Scientific men have claimed that is more scanomical than cost, and it has been stated that the Pacific Rallroad have adopted it, as it will save them $5.000,000 per year in fuel. It this be true, which there is no reason to doubt, we will take a glance at perfect combustion from nother stand point, and see whether it is posalbie to produce perket combustion of hydrocarbons without all this complication and ex-The common fallow candle is a solid hidro-earbon, but when it buins, perfect combustion does not take place, and why? Simply because the outer surface of the flame alone is exposed to the exygen of the air. The Argand lamp burns oil, which is a fluid hydro-carbon, but in this case every surface of the flame is exposed challenged the "First Nine" of the Pittsburgh to the atmek of air, and consequently perfect potential manufacturing and commercial greatthe appliances previously mentioned. The Aramp has now been in use for 78 years, and the whole scientific world has so far falled to dis cover a more simple and economical principle of producing perfect combustion. Petroleum burns as well in the Argand lamp as any other fluid hydro-carbon, and produces a light of intense brilliancy. This principle has recently been applied to burning crude petroleum for fuel, with this difference, that the admission of air to the name is regulated by registers at the different augles of ingress, so that it may be more accurate ly adjusted for heating purposes, and also that the flame is so manipulated that intensity or reaction of heat is produced at will. The latter is a very important point, and because it is quantily and not intensity of heat which is required, unless in tense it burns out the boiler; it is therefore desirable to have the power of radiation. Here

GRATS: During the last sutume I purchased one of your No. 12 ORIENTAL PARLOR FUE with a register placed in the floor of one of my parlors. The rooms which I sought to heat are as follows:

Total number of square.feet 1008 " A surface nearly equal to two rooms each of 23 feet square. The ceilings to Nos. 3, 4, 5 and 6 are nine feet and one inch in height.

During the month of December no particular ecount was kept of the quantity of coul that was consumed to heat this space; but carly in January my attention was called to the very small mount that had been used, and feeling deeply Interested in all new juventions and improve ments, I determined to keep an accurate recorof the daily consumption, together with the range of the thermometer in the external atmosphere This record, as will be seen, covers the intervafrom January 6 to February 28, 1867, a period of hity-three days. The coal was weighed daily, to a quarter of a pound; the quantity consumed was 1,52314 pounds, or an average of 28 78-100 pounds per day of twenty-four hours, as the are was no out during the time.

The average range of the thermometur, as kept morning and evening by that accurate statisticial (on all subjects connected with the weather) Mr. Joel Andrews, was 23 32-100 degrees above from 1336 to 4756 pounds per day, and the exten nal temperature from 5 degrees below zero to 45 above, and that the rate of the former is genera ly in close approximation to the condition of the latter. In the cases where there is any consider able variation it is mainly due to the increased draft in the Furuace, caused by high winds which prevailed on those days, and our own neglect is not setting the Regulator in correspondence with the same, for this Regulator has the consumption of the coal under as complete control as the Gov ernor of an Engine has of its speed. If more care had been used during the mild days to see the Regulator in accordance with the tempora ture of the weather, a material reduction could fore stated. The bix different rooms and halls, as describe were warmed to my period satisfaction, during the coldest of the weather, and in the cellar, at the end of the basement hall, nothing was froze during the winter. I was never approved or pooned by the escape of Coal Gas ; the fire did no "go out" during the tune.
